Thanks, Gerald. I agree. I have asked Ken if he has an example of such a motion. That was only yesterday, so I think we should give him a few days to see if he can find something. If he can't, we can prepare a draft motion for your review. I will plan to do this next week if Ken comes up empty.

Hello Joel,

Thanks for the update. The act of initiating the HPOZ boundary correction / adjustment may be done through introduction of a Council Motion. A Council-initiated zoning ordinance change historically means the Department of City Planning will incorporate the item into its work program and assign in-house City staff to prepare all the required documents (public hearing notices, ordinance map, ordinance language) and facilitate the approval process through the City Planning Commission and City Council. Ken Bernstein will need to full understand this and be cooperative in moving the item through the decision-making process.

For starters, a draft Motion would help - is City planning staff going to provide examples of previous Council Motions? Otherwise a draft Motion out of your office can only help.

Gerald

Good afternoon.

Please see the email below from Christina Park in OHR/DCP.

Gerald, I assume that having CM Cedillo introduce a motion to amend the HPOZ will not be an issue. I thought I would check with you to see if your office has an example of such a motion. If you do not, I will ask Christina and Ken Bernstein if they have an example for another HPOZ. If they don't, it won't be a problem for our office to create one.

Joel

Hi Joel,

After consulting the City Attorney's office and with Heather Bleemers, whom you recommended we reach out to, it is looking like the shortcut zone change would not be feasible in this scenario. The boundary correction would need to be initiated as a Council motion and move through standard channels.

I will check in with a few other colleagues who might have dealt with similar scenarios, if not identical, and follow up with more information for you later this week.

Regards,
Christina

Good morning, Christina and Ken.

Another week (+) has slipped away so I wanted to check in with you on the HPOZ correction path (see below). I assume that by now you've put the question to the City Attorney's office. Can you please let us know what the conclusion is.

Thank you,

Joel

Happy New Year, Christina.

Have you had a chance to chat with the city attorney's office on the "short-cut" zone change process that we discussed before the holidays?
